

PATRIOT GAMES

by Tom Clancy

When a terrorist attack suddenly shatters the afternoon calm of London's St. James's, ex US marine Jack Ryan doesn't stop to think. Instinctively, he hurls himself into the action and shoots one of the terrorists. His impulsive bravery makes him a hero and wins him honour beyond his wildest dreams—especially when he finds out the identity of the people whose lives he has saved—but it also turns Jack Ryan the hero into Jack Ryan the hunted. The terrorists are hell-bent on revenge and, step by step, begin to stalk Ryan and his family.

This riveting new novel, packed with action and suspense, is the latest from the bestselling author of The Hunt for Red October.

SNOW ON THE WIND

by Hugh Miller

Megan Roberts is committed to her work as a district nurse in an impoverished Welsh mining town. When her boss, Dr. O'Casey, takes a year off to rest, Timothy Morris arrives to take his place. At first Megan is antagonistic, reluctant to accept the new doctor who seems to be challenging her authority. But when she learns that he is hiding a great personal sadness, she grows to respect him. As the two work together to gain the trust and acceptance of the small community, their love steadily deepens—though Megan must soon face the fact that love alone will not be enough . . .

A moving story about TV's indomitable and much-loved heroine of The District Nurse.

THE JUDGMENT

by Howard E. Goldfluss

"As God is my witness, Mr. Hammond, she was dead before I got there." So says Peter Jorgensen, and something about this frightened young man makes his defence lawyer believe him. But the evidence against Peter, who is accused of murdering a glamorous New York socialite, is overwhelming: a secret love affair with the victim, a lie to the police, fingerprints. Unless Marc Hammond can find the real killer—a mystery man Peter glimpsed on the night of the slaying—his client will surely be convicted.

This powerful courtroom drama crackles with tension on every page, until the climactic moment when the scales of justice are brought shockingly into balance.

SARUM: The Beginning

by Edward Rutherford

In the beginning it was just a bare bowl of land where five rivers met, but it was destined to become one of England's finest cities. The place was to be called Sarum, and this is its story, from the Ice Age to the fourteenth century. Set against a sweeping panorama of English history, this novel tells of dramatic lives of successive generations at Sarum: the quarrels which divide them, the legacies which unite them. From the stubby-fingered Nooma, who shapes the sarsens of Stonehenge, to his descendent Osmund Mason whose genius helps create Salisbury's magnificent cathedral, the pages are filled with an unforgettable cast.
