

TSUNAMI

Richard Martin Stern

Tsunami is the dreaded word for a killer wave that, fuelled by millions of tons of water, can travel at over six hundred miles per hour, and explode on shore to a height of over a hundred feet. If oceanographer Pete Williamson's calculations are correct, just such a force will soon hit Encino Beach, California, packed with people and boats. Is Pete's prediction accurate? And can he convince the sceptical townspeople in time?

High-impact suspense from the author of Wildfire.

THE CITY OF JOY

Dominique Lapierre

In Calcutta lies an overpopulated, disease-ridden slum known ironically as Anand Nagar, the City of Joy. To this place come two men: one, a priest seeking to share the lives of its people; the other, a peasant toiling between the shafts of a rickshaw to provide for his family. As each is absorbed into the community, he becomes part of the day-to-day heroism that transforms it from a place of despair to one of hope, even for its children.

A moving, true account by a distinguished author.

ROCKETS' RED GLARE

Greg Dinallo

Operation Slow Burn: a cunning Soviet plot to penetrate America's nuclear shield. The fuse was lit a generation ago; now it is set to detonate. But the plan relies on a traitor, and traitors are not reliable. Just as the US President is ready to sign an arms treaty, a Russian agent's act of revenge unleashes a chain of events that will bring the world to a heart-stopping crisis. This is a dazzling novel that explodes with all the colour and excitement of a Roman candle.

HUNTER'S MOON

Garry Kilworth

O-ha the vixen has lived in Trinity Wood ever since leaving her parents. Now she is fully grown, with a mate of her own, awaiting her first litter of cubs. Surrounded by the wood she loves, she thinks her happiness can never end. But every day the humans are coming closer, with their bulldozers churning up the earth and their concrete mixers creating streets and houses.

Garry Kilworth's thrilling and powerful story skillfully dramatises the threats to our vanishing countryside.
